Announcements & Thoughts:

Excerpts from Cultivating Curiosity in K-12 Classrooms

- Humans and animals reflexively seek out novelty.
- Being curious is evolutionarily adaptive.
- Infants and children have an insatiable urge to explore, know, understand and master their worlds.
- Young brains are optimized for new information and change making infants and children superior learners to older learners.
- Children's brains are optimized to learn from exploration and experimentation, not from passively listening to teachers.

From a parent....

Dear Dr. Chomokos,

I wanted to send a belated thank-you to you, and also to all of the teachers who spent extra time organizing and presenting, for the World Languages/Science Parent Curriculum Night. It was time well spent, and I enjoyed hearing more about the curriculum in both of these areas. I thought the science presentations were particularly effective, both Ms. Fortunato's introduction, and the following grade-by-grade explanation of how the curriculum progresses. I got a good feel for the goals of the program, and was very impressed by the quality of the science curriculum.

I also wanted to say that when I told my son what a good presentation it was, I learned that he thinks Ms. Fortunato is "the best science teacher ever!" He had a class with her last year.
